Singapore's data watchdog fines hotel booking platform for data breach

Singapore's Personal Data Protection Commission (PDPC) has issued a fine of SGD 74 thousand on Commeasure Pte Ltd, a travel company which operates the travel booking website - RedDoorz, that exposed 5.9 million customers data. PDPC reported that the penalty was imposed for failing to put in place reasonable security arrangements to prevent the unauthorized access and exfiltration of customers' personal data hosted in a cloud database. The commission considered the company's cooperative behavior and remedial actions all the while running a travel business during the pandemic before issuing the financial penalty and have also given them 30 days to pay the fine, post which interest rates will become applicable.

Apple and Google fined by Italian competition watchdog for aggressive data acquisition practices

The competition and market authority (AGCM) has sanctioned a fine of EUR 10 million each to Google Ireland Ltd. and Apple Distribution International Ltd. for two violations of the consumer code. One for lack of information, and another for aggressive practices regarding the acquisition and use of consumer data for commercial purposes. The Authority found that both Google and Apple did not provide clear and immediate information on the acquisition or on the use of user data for commercial purposes and accordingly held that there is a consumption relationship between the users and the two operators. Thus, a total fine of EUR 20 million was issued by the Italian watchdog.

Trial court of Massachusetts grants class action settlement on hospital's cookie practices

The Suffolk Superior Court in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts approved a preliminary settlement of USD 18.4 million in a class action lawsuit against Mass General Brigham Incorporated, and its partners. It is alleged that the defendants used web analytics tools to track users' behavior on its website domains to gather information about them and sold that information to third parties, without the user's consent. A website built specifically for potential claimants to file their claims has published the settlement notice. The final approval hearing for the settlement will take place on 18 January 2022.
